Abstract: Pertains to the story and ways in which Jean G. Co'te', an early land surveyor, legislator and pioneer, helped shaped Alberta's early identity. Some of the topics discussed in the book are as follows, family, politics, early surveying and Cote's contribution to Alberta's Research Council. As a legislator, Cote was influential in the development of Alberta's Tar Sands. Additionally, the foreword has been written by E.J. Hart, the previous director of the Whyte Museum of the Canadian Rockies, thus drawing a connection to the Canadian Rocky Mountains but more specifically, Banff.
